Meet Me At The Crossroads

Female, Black, LGBT and Christian. Meet me at the crossroads. Indeed it is at the intersection of the multiple identities that we hold that we may find oppression, disdain and often hate.

As I watched Ferguson, Missouri smoldering literally and emotionally like Watts in the sixties, I was compelled to stand up for me - myself and the other me. As a Black, Female, Lesbian, Christian, mother, many things about this incident make me feel sad, angry and disempowered. And I recognize that I can't face the overwhelming grief and frustration, nor be an avid activist in isolation. So I turn to my community, colleagues, peers and family.

Part of my hope and commitment and even direction comes from my association with the UCC. We are a denomination that ministers to the World at the margins. God's Extravagant Welcome is shared to all those "whoever and wherever" folks on life's journey.

Still for some of us it's complicated. The church is the place where many of us were nurtured and the place that we can most identify with after facing a world where we fight to be accepted by others. And yet, some of us find that we are not welcomed fully, when we have to check one of ourselves at the door. We have to some part of ourselves tucked away in a dark and lonely closet.

I thought about a scripture that described a similar experience that Jesus had. In John 11, the story is recounted that Jesus was in his own community, ready to share his gifts with them. Capable of bring healing and miracles. But they decided that he wasn't "their kind." They labeled him and said "nothing good" could come from his origins.

Now I can imagine that when word got around later that Jesus was becoming somebody. The community took some credit for his gifts, while they downplayed all the things they disdained about him. But like Jesus, those who are marginalized can be assured that God created them and called them to a purpose. And like Jesus many African-American people, women and same gender-loving people impact the church and the world in great ways.

One of the more enjoyable experiences I have had in ministry was participating in an executive training session at Disney World, the Magic Kingdom in Orlando. The participants received a book, Be Our Guest: Perfecting the Art of Customer Service. It opens with this quote from Walt Disney: "In this volatile business of ours, we can ill afford to rest on our laurels, even to pause in retrospect. Times and conditions change so rapidly that we must keep our aim constantly focused on the future."

Now I am aware that congregants are not customers but we are trying to do church in a very consumer oriented society. So how do we begin to look at how we offer our message in effective ways? I think that it is helpful to consider the lessons of the past but we cannot rest in this place for the call of Christ to be in the world and bearers of Gospel light is always before us leading us onward. And we are all aware that we are living in times where things are changing rapidly and we need to figure out how to accommodate and incorporate those influences in our life together as the Body of Christ.

Your newly elected Southeast Conference Board of Directors met on September 12 and 13 and began the process of looking at their own strengths in leadership and good governance with the help of Don Clark and Heather Kimmel of the office of the General Counsel of the United Church of Christ. They then looked at the work ahead to create an organizational culture and ways of doing things that will support and enhance the mission and ministry of this Conference. But we know we can't rest on our laurels. Instead we need to look at how we move this beloved part of the church into the future God envisions for our life and ministry in this particular part of God's creation. I hope you will be partners on this journey with our leadership group and that you will add your part to the conversation and to the work that is before us.

The Road Less Traveled

A reflection on the GTE Immersion Trip

The final week of August 2014 was filled with unforgettable moments among the twelve who had embarked on the Global Theological Education (GTE) immersion trip to the Blackfeet Nation in Montana. Three leaders and nine participants-traveling from Georgia, Tennessee, and Iowa- stayed at a 20,000 acre private ranch in the heart of the Blackfeet Indian Reservation, some of us meeting for the first time face-to-face after nearly two years of learning together through the PATHWAYS online course platform.

The excitement and the joy of coming together as a group abounded, while the anxiety of facing the unknown in a new place was palpable. The intensity of emotions-both good and bad-stayed with the group throughout the week as the participants encountered several different cultures to learn about in a short period of time and coped with a unique communal life in the context of unfamiliar surroundings. The group learned about the ranch life where 500 cattle roam freely on the vast grassland next to the seemingly endless wheat and barley fields; we discovered the state-of-the-art model of communal living at the Hutterite colony whose residents gave the group a lot to think about; we met Blackfeet natives who presented us with the Blackfeet history, culture, and life marked by tumultuous past and uncertain future; and we explored the striking wonders of Nature in the Glacier National Park that neighbors the ranch.

ONA Service

Join with other UCC churches for ONA/Pride weekend! The events will kick off on Saturday afternoon with a screening and panel discussion of the documentary The New Black, which examines how the African American community (and more specifically, African American churches) are continuing to grapple with the issue of LGBTQ+ equality. This will be followed by a reception, giving attendees an opportunity to fellowship with each other. The evening will conclude with the ONA service featuring seven speakers, including Designated Conference Minister, June Boutwell, offering sermonettes on passages from Michael Piazza's book, Queeries.

We are very excited about this event and hope that you will be able to participate by attending, encouraging members of your church to attend, or providing a financial donation to help sponsor the event. ## March in the Atlanta Pride Parade October 12, 2014

Now in our third year, churches from across the Southeast Conference will join once again to march together in this year's Atlanta Pride parade. Congregations from across the SEC are invited to come to Atlanta and join others in a show of our wide welcome, solidarity, and unity on Sunday, October 12, 2014.

Churches are encouraged to wear UCC or UCC congregation t-shirts and carry signs showing our radical hospitality and inclusion. The past two years have been very successful for our contingent, as we have shouted that "God is Still Speaking." If the growth of our Atlanta congregations is any indication, that message is being heard in the community loud and clear!

The welcome link to participants at Pride is www.ucc.org/atlanta which redirects to www.secucc.org/pride. You can share these links with friends interested in the radical hospitality of the United Church of Christ.

If you are interested in participating in the parade as either a solo participant or as a congregation, please contact Erin Johnson, our volunteer coordinator from Kirkwood UCC. She can be reached at erinrebecca@live.com.
