From the Conference Minister

Many of you, like me, watched the news from Charlottesville, VA unfold over the last week. I was filled with sadness, horror, and disgust. I was also filled with fear. Charlottesville is part of the Shenandoah Association of the Central Atlantic Conference. This is my former association. I know Charlottesville. There is one UCC congregation there: Sojourners UCC. I have worshipped with them many times. I have walked in that park. I know the organizers of Congregate Charlottesville. Rev. Seth Wispelway was ordained into the Christian ministry weeks after I left to come here. Brittany Caine-Conley is still a MID with the Shenandoah Association. I remember meeting with both of them as they applied to be a MID.

Over the last week, I have struggled to find words that make sense. There were three things that touched me, and I've already shared them on our website and social media in the hopes that they will touch you and inform your thoughts and your words this coming night and coming day. Read my thoughts and the three things here.

In addition, the UCC has extensive coverage of the Charlottesville events:

Reminder about Free White Privilege Course from the UCC

White Privilege: Let's Talk—A Resource for Transformational Dialogue is an adult curriculum from the United Church of Christ that's designed to invite church members to engage in safe, meaningful, substantive, and bold conversations on race. This is a downloadable resource in PDF format that's free of charge and can be used by any church regardless of size or budget.

Divided into four focused parts, each one introduces a different aspect of the dynamic of white privilege:

1. The Spiritual Autobiography Told Through the Lens of Race
2. Whiteness as the Norm: Five Loci of Insights on the Binary of Light/Dark and Black/White
3. The Cash Value of Whiteness or Whiteness as a Tax-Exempt Status
4. On Becoming an Ally

In all four parts, each author contributes a different view of the subject matter presented based on their unique personal experiences. The materials include questions for discussion and reflection.
